There is a well-known story told in the Hadeeth books. Once a lady from the tribe of Makhzoom was guilty of a sin. She had committed adultery. No one had the courage to come forward. They knew that Rasulullah (Sallallahu Alayhi Wasallam) had said that if a person commits a sin, he should be reported to him. So Usaama (Radiallahu anhu) went and spoke. Rasulullah (Sallallahu Alayhi Wasallam) strongly admonished him. Thereupon Rasulullah (Sallallahu Alayhi Wasallam) gave a sermon and said to all: "The people of previous nations were destroyed because they did not report their wrongdoers to the Prophet." Similar incidents are also mentioned in books of Ahaadeeth. This is the type of action which made fear enter the hearts of the people. At that same time there was a certain Roman prisoner in the hands of the Muslims. By chance, he managed to escape. He too explained in similar terms that these people are devoted worshippers of Allah by night, and valiant fighters by day. At the battle of Antioch, Yazid bin Abu Sufyan (Radiallahu anhu) wrote a letter to Sayyidina Abu Bakr (Radi Allahu anhu). In it he said: "I humbly report that after praises to Allah and salutation to the Prophet, that when the news of our journey reached the Christians, they became very afraid. In reply Sayyidina Abu Bakr (Radiallahu anhu) wrote: "Your letter reached us wherein I became aware of your victory over Heraclius. Heraclius had a very huge army. By comparison the Muslims were few. Sayyidina Amr bin-al-Aas (Radi Allahu anhu) replied: "You Muslims can never be defeated because of being few in number. But because of becoming involved in battles, you will always be victorious. It is this spirit that made the Muslims conquerors over men and nations, on land and sea, over stones and water."
